

AIG in the News

Mr. Mucerino discussed AIG's climate change strategies at Yale University.

Ralph W. Mucerino Discusses AIG's Climate Change Strategies at Yale University

Ralph W. Mucerino, President, AIG Global Marine and Energy, recently led a discussion with students, faculty, and community members about AIG's and the Global Marine and Energy group's climate change strategies at Yale's Center for Business and the Environment.

Mr. Mucerino's presentation is part of AIG's efforts to continue advancing the climate change, sustainability and environmental responsibility dialogue on behalf of the insurance and financial services industries.

Some of the topics Mr. Mucerino covered during the presentation and consequent question and answer session included: the impact of climate change on the insurance industry; the AIG Advanced Energy Solutions Group and ecoPractice and their business structure and current activities; industrial risks; highlights of AIG's overall climate change-related products, services and investments; and its corporate citizenship.

"At AIG, the issue of climate change permeates all of our strategies. Climate change issues and business opportunities cannot be delegated to one individual from a personal perspective because we are all citizens of the planet and have an obligation to each other to protect our environment," said Mr. Mucerino.

"After listening to Ralph, it's clear to me that insurance companies like AIG are doing more than just managing risk when it comes to climate change," said Bryan Garcia, Program Director of the Center for Business and the Environment at Yale. "By investing in clean technologies, green buildings, and the emerging environmental credit markets, the industry is helping to create solutions as well as business opportunities."
