

Robbery Prevention Checklist

Numerous studies have found a direct correlation between available cash and the likelihood of robbery. Reducing the amount of money available to robbers is the best prevention strategy. In addition, by reducing the likelihood of robbery, the possibility of injuries and fatalities to employees and customers is reduced.

Retail establishments are particularly vulnerable to robbery. To assist businesses in implementing a robbery prevention program, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), in its Guidelines for Workplace Violence Prevention Programs for Night Retail Establishments, has developed a set of questions that can be used to assess a business' robbery exposure. These questions include:

- Is cash on hand or in cash drawers kept at a minimum? Interviews with robbers have indicated that when the amount of available cash drops from $100 to $50, fully half the robbers lose interest in the store as a robbery target.
- Is cash, especially large bills, removed from cash registers and deposited in drop safes?
- Are signs posted noting that only limited cash is available and employees do not have access to the safe?
- Is cash transferred to the bank regularly, but not on a set, predictable schedule?
- Has consideration been given to using an armored car service or having a guard accompany bank messengers (especially for night deposits)?
- Has consideration been given to limiting the nighttime operating hours of the business? Studies have found that most robberies occur during nighttime hours, especially after midnight.
- Has consideration been given to closing the business at night, especially if other neighborhood businesses close? Robbers prefer targets that allow them to escape unseen.
- Are posters and displays, which obstruct the view into the premises or block the employees' view of outside areas, not placed on windows?
- Have employees been advised to observe and report suspicious persons?
- Have employees been trained in procedures to follow during and after a robbery?
- Have employees been advised not to take any actions that, during a robbery, could jeopardize personal safety?
- Are "buddy" procedures used for opening (such as one employee waiting outside while another searches the premises) and closing (having one employee leave and go to the safety of a car before the other employee locks up) the business?
- Without conflicting with life safety code requirements, are side and rear doors kept locked at all times? In some robberies, access is gained through the side or rear door.

- Are security devices, such as holdup alarm systems and closed-circuit television, provided and employees trained in their use? If a holdup alarm is provided, employees should be advised not to attempt to actuate it while the robber is on the premises.
- If robbery is a persistent problem, has consideration been given to providing bullet-resisting enclosures for employees?
- If there is an automated teller machine (ATM) on the premises, is it located away from the front door so that the robber is not provided with an easy escape after robbing a customer?

COPYRIGHT ©2014, ISO Services, Inc.

CH-20-15 1/13/14

The information, suggestions and recommendations contained herein are for general informational purposes only. This information has been compiled from sources believed to be reliable. Risk Consulting Services do not address every possible loss potential, law, rule, regulation, practice or procedure. No warranty, guarantee, or representation, either expressed or implied, is made as to the correctness or sufficiency of any such service. Reliance upon, or compliance with, any recommendation in no way guarantees any result, including without limitation the fulfillment of your obligations under your insurance policy or as may otherwise be required by any laws, rules or regulations. No responsibility is assumed for the discovery and/or elimination of any hazards that could cause accidents, injury or damage. The information contained herein should not be construed as financial, accounting, tax or legal advice and does not create an attorney-client relationship.

This document is not intended to replace any recommendations from your equipment manufacturers. If you are unsure about any particular testing or maintenance procedure, please contact the manufacturer or your equipment service representative.

American International Group, Inc. (AIG) is a leading global insurance organization. AIG member companies provide a wide range of property casualty insurance, life insurance, retirement solutions, and other financial services to customers in more than 80 countries and jurisdictions. These diverse offerings include products and services that help businesses and individuals protect their assets, manage risks and provide for retirement security. AIG common stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Additional information about AIG can be found at www.aig.com | YouTube: www.youtube.com/aig | Twitter: @AIGinsurance www.twitter.com/AIGinsurance | LinkedIn: www.linkedin.com/company/aig. These references with additional information about AIG have been provided as a convenience, and the information contained on such websites is not incorporated by reference into this document.

AIG is the marketing name for the worldwide property-casualty, life and retirement, and general insurance operations of American International Group, Inc. For additional information, please visit our website at www.aig.com. All products and services are written or provided by subsidiaries or affiliates of American International Group, Inc. Products or services may not be available in all countries and jurisdictions, and coverage is subject to underwriting requirements and actual policy language. Non-insurance products and services may be provided by independent third parties. Certain property-casualty coverages may be provided by a surplus lines insurer. Surplus lines insurers do not generally participate in state guaranty funds, and insureds are therefore not protected by such funds.

© American International Group, Inc. All rights reserved.