

Precisely what you need

At AIG, tailor-made safety and loss control services are an integral part of every Aerospace insurance program. We put at our client's disposal our own exceptionally experienced safety and loss control professionals. These experts collaborate with clients in every corner of the globe, helping to achieve their particular goals — from reducing losses, to enhancing risk management controls, to mitigating employee injury, lost time and medical expenses.

Who Benefits?

We tailor our safety and loss control services for clients worldwide and in every corner of the aerospace marketplace, including:

- Corporate Aviation
- FBOs
- Airports
- Airlines
- Repair stations
- Manufacturing facilities

Since 1999, our safety and loss control team has helped airlines, airports, and corporate fleets enhance safety, prevent losses, and gain a better understanding of their risks.

Our mission is to collaborate with every customer to ensure that they have the sound foundation they need to build their best safety program and to improve the operational risk inherent to their operation.

You Get a Plan of Action (Not a Reaction)

Our services are driven by client needs and elevated by exceptional expertise. Our loss control professionals listen closely to our client's concerns. We carefully consider a customer's past history and future goals. Drawing on our more than 50 years of experience underwriting aviation risks of all types, we work to identify and anticipate claims and loss trends that might impact our clients, and to provide them the safety and loss control services they need for no additional fees.

Our loss control team has in-depth experience in various occupational safety, property and casualty risk management and safety management disciplines. Many of our professionals are pilots themselves. Being closely in tune with aerospace industry claim trends and losses worldwide, they are always finding new ways to manage and reduce risk and loss ... and proactively share them with our clients.

Diverse Services

There is no pre-set menu of services here. Rather, our Aerospace safety and loss control capabilities span all the areas that matter to our customers: from operational issues, to occupational health and safety, to personal protective equipment, loss and cost containment, and regulatory compliance.

On any given day, around the globe, members of our safety and loss control team may be working with an airport of any size, or helping a large airline enhance its SMS program. We may be fine-tuning one client's aircraft maintenance practices, while helping another instill more sophisticated accident investigation practices. We may be on-site, launching training that enables our client's baggage handlers to work safely without sacrificing speed and accuracy, or sharing industry best practices in tow vehicle operator safety.
