

Prepare your employees for the unthinkable.

Training and support for an ever-changing terror landscape.

Armed attacks by 'active shooters' and marauding terrorist firearm attacks (MTFAs) continue to rise and evolve.

In-depth training and support is essential to ensure individuals and organisations are the utmost prepared.

Spanning ideologies and unpredictable locations, MTFAs are usually in crowded public areas and aim to create maximum panic.

Categories include:

Radicalized individual (lone wolf)	Siege with hostages
Marauding group of gunmen	Disgruntled employee
Suicide bomber	Active shooter

Training and support

AIG insureds can test and improve their ability to prevent and in worst case respond to an armed attack via an in-depth training and support programme provided by global risk and crisis management consultancy NYA International.

The programme includes:

Introductory workshop

- Strategic risk reviews
- Workforce training
- Incident response planning
- Tabletop exercises

Ongoing support

- 24/7 access to crisis response consultants
- Site review by security specialists
- Resilience and response workshop: corporate/workforce/personal
- Corporate self-assessment checklist
- Post-incident support

Protection if the unthinkable occurs

Insureds can also make certain they are prepared in the event an armed attack does occur. A number of post-event services and coverages are available via Crisis Solution's Assault Endorsement.

Additional support available via the endorsement includes, but is not limited to:

- Death or dismemberment (vary by risk)
- Psychiatric and medical costs
- Public relations support
- Increased cost of security
- Business interruption costs

If you would like help with any of these topics, please contact Fritz Barjon at Fritz.Barjon@aig.com.