that manage and prevent risk

Our casualty risk consultants combine decades of industry-specific expertise, data-driven insights and the power of technology with best-in-class service to deliver the right solutions to manage and prevent risk. This is all designed to help clients assess their risks and pinpoint those safety loss drivers that have the greatest potential impact on their business and employees. Our risk consultants will help identify areas for risk improvement, develop action plans and design evaluation methodologies to assist clients in finding solutions that help their organization reduce risk.

Wide-ranging capabilities that reduce a client's total cost of risk

Providing industry expertise

We have experts spanning virtually every industry whose purpose is to support clients in minimizing risk and achieving their strategic goals. Our team of casualty risk consultants has deep industry expertise and risk management experience.

Delivering data-driven, benchmarked and targeted opportunities

We turn big data into smart data to help identify laser-focused, cost-effective risk management opportunities. AIG has invested significant resources into our data analytics technology and personnel to better measure and benchmark clients' large data sets.

Delivering outcome-based, strategic solutions

Our team of experts can help clients identify opportunity gaps and implement a plan to address those gaps thereby improving safety and reducing the total cost of risk. This means reduced claims frequency and costs – a true financial value and a more efficient business model.

Providing partnership-based advocacy

No two organizations are the same. We take a partnership-based approach to address the particulars of a client's business. Risk consultants work closely with a client's safety and risk management leaders to understand their operations and methodologies, provide guidance, and develop effective solutions by way of collaboration.

Showcasing our capabilities through Success Stories

Security Challenges

Terrorism, Active Shooter, Workplace Violence: Security challenges surrounding mass casualty events are at the forefront of many clients' minds. Whether clients are doing enough to protect their people and property has as much to do with safety as it does with liability. This is particularly true now that businesses are more aware of the risks. Even with awareness, spend on anti-terrorism and related measures has a challenging return on investment equation in light of competing budgetary needs. AIG helps clients assess the risks which will most directly affect them and their people, putting security challenges in perspective. With innovative work such as the "Stop the Bleed" bleeding control program and the SAFETY Act, recent release of our SMARTBlastSM modeling tool and other analytics and modeling platforms, AIG brings all potential solutions to bear to help clients be more informed and face security challenges head on.
