

Business Interruption

Specialist team

providing business interruption assessments

that quantify risks and consult on Business Continuity Plans

Our Business Impact Specialist Team offers a range of business impact related risk engineering services.

Wide-ranging capabilities that reduce a client's total cost of risk

Business income valuation and assessment

We provide comprehensive business interruption assessments of single site locations, including evaluation of business income, interdependencies, alternative production capacities, inventory durations, downtime evaluations, restoration and step recovery. We also specialize in analytical services, reviewing and developing business income worksheets, business income exposure assessment by division or product line and recovery and restoration valuations.

Interdependency evaluation and assessment

We help clients quantify risk with more complex analytics and modeling for aggregating business impacts resulting from disruption to interdependent locations. AIG's proprietary Contingent Business Interruption (CBI) Visualization and Risk Assessment Model has been specifically developed to evaluate the risk and quantify the losses directly due to interdependent exposures as well as enabling mitigation and interdependency business impact modeling.

Make-up capacity assessment

We provide a range of services to evaluate, quantify and validate the make-up production capacity levels for an organization. These include analysis of production metrics for manufacturers and service companies, identifying alternative sources of production and service delivery and reviewing agreements with these alternative locations. We also evaluate the logistic requirements, lag time, ramp-up profiles and identify production metrics at alternative locations to assess accurate make-up productive capacity.

Business impact analysis

Our Business Impact Analysis services for manufacturing and service companies identify Single Point of Failure (gaps in day to day processes that are not readily replicated elsewhere in the business) which present significant disruption potential to the overall operation. This approach lays the foundation for development of a robust business continuity plan for the organization. Our team can focus on a division, product line or even a specific location.

Business continuity planning support

We provide a range of consultative service offerings tailored to the clients' specific needs, such as developing disruption triggers and response plans, reviewing and assessing existing Business Continuity Plans (BCP) or Disaster Recovery Plans, developing testing protocols and exercises, BCP training and business continuity team development.
