

Environmental Risk Solutions

Environmental risks present demanding and complex technical, operational, legal, regulatory and reputational challenges to businesses. We have dedicated risk consultants with decades of environmental risk management experience, including professional engineers, geologists, chemists, biologists, and environmental scientists with deep industry backgrounds.

Wide-ranging capabilities that reduce a client's total cost of risk

Identifying environmental exposures

We help our clients manage a range of environmental exposures from day to day operational activities (e.g. storage or manufacturing processes) and accidents (e.g. fires releasing hazardous materials, onsite fuel spills and vehicle accidents) to planning and preparedness for environmental incidents. We evaluate operational risks and potential environmental liabilities that may arise from damage to soil, groundwater, surface water, or air affecting human health and the environment including protected habitats & species. Our consultants work with our clients to reduce their total cost of risk.

Mitigating environmental exposures

Our solutions include reviews of clients' operational practices and procedures (including management plans and environmental health and safety plans), exposure assessments (from insured's sites to off-site and emerging exposures), training programs (such as emergency response and hazard communication) and a host of additional programs and services including customized videos and topic specific technical memos and white papers.

Emergency 24-7 environmental response

Our PIER (Pollution Incident & Environmental Response)[®] program provides clients with round-the-clock response to environmental emergencies. Response is activated by calling the PIER 24-hour hotline, and the right team of local specialists is mobilized immediately to help the client mitigate the loss, control costs and minimize the public impact and their own liabilities.

PIER maintains a global network of environmental specialists to assist with every stage of a crisis event from chemical spills, natural disaster and industrial hygiene to forensic engineering, investigative services and crisis communications. PIER services are available in the US, Canada, Europe, Australia, and New Zealand. This program supports AIG Commercial insurance policies, with no extra costs, fees or out-of-pocket expenses required to access the PIER hotline.
