

Security, Terrorism and Crisis Solutions

CRS can help clients with a range of security risk management services

Preparation

Prevention

Response

Client Risk Solutions (CRS) Security Solutions team offers clients our global depth of experience in handling all aspects of operational security through preparation, prevention and response. We tailor our assessment and risk engineering services to match each client's unique requirements. Our risk solutions are designed to enable our clients to detect, pre-empt/mitigate and recover from the operational risks they face. With experience in working with clients on issues ranging from workplace crime, cybersecurity, political violence, evacuation planning and support, kidnap and ransom, terrorism and armed conflict, CRS's Security Solutions team have the solution to enable clients' businesses.

Wide-ranging capabilities that reduce a client's total cost of risk

Threat intelligence and analytics

CRS can help clients improve their intelligence collection plan and assets, as well as provide clients with threat intelligence. CRS intelligence products range from background information (such as pre-travel briefings), via crime and terror heat mapping, to bespoke assessment and briefings on specific security or country issues.

Security, crisis training and exercising

While our consulting services help clients to address key threats to their physical and operational security, our experience demonstrates the value of practicing what we preach. We also provide a range of training and exercising services at all levels of the client's organization: from the C-Suite via management to the staff on shop-floor. This ranges from classroom style "walk-through, talk-through" training to active "table top" exercise to help clients with preparation, planning, prevention and response.

Risk engineering

We have pioneered Terrorism Risk Engineering services in which our senior risk engineers conduct detailed terrorism risk evaluations that enable clients to reduce their terrorism risks. Using SMARTBlast, our propriety modeling tool, we can calculate loss estimates for potential explosives and help implement risk mitigation strategies to limit losses and save lives.

Cybersecurity

CRS's cyber risk consulting team work with clients to reduce the likelihood and the impact of a cyber-attack, be that corporate espionage, information destruction or ransomware. The cyber team work seamlessly with physical security consultants to prevent any physical enabler of a cyber-attack being introduced into a client's system.

Security surveys and reviews

We undertake in-depth physical security assessments for clients, working from the strategic down to the tactical level, leveraging both our operational experience and our claims-derived data. The assessments cover a range of a client's security risks from insider threats and workplace violence through to terrorism and armed conflicts. CRS works with existing security teams, or can help clients to develop their own capability, in order to build a more holistic and resilient security capability. Uniquely, CRS works cross-lines to ensure that the various layers of protection (safety and security, fire and continuity) complement rather than conflict with each other.

Business continuity management

CRS's business continuity management experts work with clients to ensure that they are best able to manage a security crisis, and minimize business interruption in the event of an incident.
