AIG's Client Risk Solutions (CRS) property risk training partners with clients to help them better understand their property risk and loss potential.

At CRS, we take a holistic approach to assisting organizations to identify and manage complex risks through a broad range of consultative services and the development of customized risk management training programs. Property clients of all sizes can benefit from our leading edge training programs delivered on topics designed around their exposures. AIG training programs can help an organization create a single focused vision to reduce risk and potential loss.

Training sessions

CRS training sessions are highly interactive, and cover real world issues and solutions. We apply AIG technical expertise with National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) codes and standards in discussions on loss prevention and reduction, management programs, fire protection systems maintenance and analysis, thinking "outside of the box on risk," active and passive fire protection systems, and special hazards and protection. In-depth reviews are also conducted on insurance industry property risk improvement reports and recommendations. As part of the class, attendees will observe fire hydrant and/or pump systems flow testing, as well as the discharge of a variety of sprinkler and nozzle types.

Class will take place at the Training Center in Greenville and Anderson, SC where real buildings, hazards and protection systems are utilized to support concepts.
